Dear Bakkavor Hiring Team,

I'm enthusiastic about applying to TfL's Projects & Programme Graduate Scheme as it combines my analytical abilities with my passion for improving London's transportation infrastructure. As a cox who has led rowing teams through complex race strategies, I've developed strong leadership and coordination skills that align well with project management. My experience coordinating crews and making quick decisions while considering multiple factors mirrors the skills needed to manage TfL's diverse transportation projects.

I'm particularly drawn to TfL's commitment to making London's transport network more sustainable and accessible. My academic background in data analysis, combined with my practical experience leading teams, would help me contribute to TfL's initiatives like the Elizabeth line expansion and zero-emission bus projects. I'm excited by the opportunity to help shape London's future mobility while ensuring safe and efficient service delivery.

The graduate scheme would allow me to develop comprehensive project management skills while working on initiatives that directly impact millions of Londoners. Learning from experienced professionals across different departments would help me grow into an effective project leader who can help TfL continue delivering world-class transportation services. My experience optimizing team performance and managing resources as a cox has given me a strong foundation for understanding complex operational systems - skills that would be valuable in improving London's transport network.

Thank you for looking at my application. I'm so excited to bring my enthusiasm, hard work, and project management skills to TFL. I hope we can talk soon about how I can contribute to your projects and become a dedicated team member.

Sincerely, Yeva Yesypenko
